

INSURANCE MAN IS VICTIM OF BANDITS

Believed to have been the victim of robbers, who took him to an isolated section of the Colma road near the Skyline boulevard, early Wednesday, robbed him of $250 and then threw him out of his automobile, John Daroughmis, a San Francisco insurance salesman, is at the South San Francisco hospital, recovering from injuries inflicted by the bandits, one of whom represented himself to be an officer, according to Daroughmis.

The victim of the attack, according to the story he related to Constable S. A. Landini, met a friend on the Marina, San Francisco, in the evening. The pair had several drinks, and then joined two women, according to his story. The quartet entered a hotel, the name of which the injured man does not recall. While there a man representing himself as an officer entered the room and became involved in an argument with Daroughmis, who declares he does not remember anything further until he woke up in the South San Francisco hospital.

Louis Gregory, who found the injured man, reported to Constable Landini that just before he found Daroughmis, he saw an automobile containing two men start from the vicinity and drive rapidly toward San Francisco.

Daroughmis' injuries consisted of a fractured left shoulder and scalp lacerations. When found he was very much under the influence of liquor, according to the officers.

YACHT GOES ASHORE
NEAR PEDRO POINT

Labor day brought great excitement to those who were enjoying a beach holiday. The yacht Yankee, one of the best known yachts on San Francisco bay, having participated in many regattas and races for the past twenty years, was stolen last Monday by a group of adventurous youths, who went on a wild ride which ended in disaster in the vicinity of Shelter cove, near Pedro Point.

Sydney W. Ford, San Francisco stockbroker, owner of the yacht, said the yacht was moored at the St. Francis Yacht Club until noon Labor day, when it sailed out through the Golden Gate. It was believed by members of the club that Ford was aboard, but from his ranch at Mountain View last Monday night Ford declared that no one was authorized to move the yacht, and that it had been stolen. In a short time the yacht was seen sailing very close to the shore, with her sails flapping wildly. A mysterious youth and two of his companions were flung into the sea, according to two witnesses, Charles Van, of 2116 Fillmore street, and George Gustafson, of 487 Edinburgh street.

Only one of the trio, a blonde lad about 15 years of age, appeared again. He tried to swim ashore, but called to those who were watching him that he couldn't make it, so he was assisted ashore by Joseph Bratt, of 561 Athens street, and Eddie Schroder, of 262 Irvington street. Semi-conscious and suffering from submersion, the boy was taken to a tent by Bratt, where he was given coffee and food. His account of the group's adventures was very evasive and absurd. Evidence of liquor was found on board the yacht when it was brought up on the shore. During the excitement the boy made his escape. A party of men searched for him, but could not find him.

Search is being continued for the other two boys and their companion. At a late hour last Wednesday evening the crew of the salvage tug E. A. Williams, which was riding at anchor off the shore, was waiting for the tide that they might salvage the Yacht and bring it back to the harbor in San Francisco for repairs.

On Admission day many motorists climbed the hills near the scene of the wreck to watch the tug trying to take the yacht into the water again.

BOY SCOUTS ENJOY
THREE DAY OUTING

For the final time this season the Boy Scouts and Cubs of Daly City spent the three days at Camp Snipe. The camp was very successful this trip, as there were only a small number of boys allowed to go. Test passing was the goal on this trip, and there were only a few out of the eighteen boys who didn't pass at least one test.

The test passing included fire building, cooking, Scout pace, tracking, signaling, compass, knife and axe, safety and native study. In fire building it is required to light a fire without paper and use only two matches. Cooking is to be able to prepare one-quarter of a pound of beefsteak and bake at least one potato, and if O. K.'d, eat the food. Scout pace was designed to train a boy to travel a long distance by foot without tiring rapidly. It is required to cover one mile in twelve minutes. This is done by walking about fifty steps and running the same number. Tracking generally proves a sticker, as a boy must be familiar with the rules of the forest as well as possess the alertness of the deer. Signaling is merely the idea of coordinating the hands and the brain to master a new task. The secret is being able to cut the letters. Compass is very easy and takes only a few minutes of hard study and then a little practice. It consists of naming the sixteen principal points of the compass and to be able to plot location. Knife and axe is very important, as there are few boys who can handle either in the proper manner. A boy must learn the methods of cutting a tree, trimming and sectioning it into logs.

Safety is something that is as important in camp as in the city streets, and a boy must be well aware of the few simple rules that are so often forgotten and that cause so many accidents. Nature study proves interesting to all boys, as nature always holds in store many wonders that man may not even hope to create or outdo.

There were forty-eight tests passed and the Scouts leading in the number of tests passed were Jack Brawby, Fred Drago and Clarence Smith.

The camping trip in general was the best of any previous camps. For the first time at Camp Snipe, Old Glory waved its cry of freedom while the boys gave their allegiance. Saturday was given over to study and games, while Monday the boys spent the entire day passing tests or practicing. Late Monday afternoon the boys bid a final farewell to Camp Snipe and the trip home was under way, the boys all arriving home safe at 6 o'clock. The officers are proud to report that during the outing there was only one minor accident.

The boys wish to thank Mrs. Widasky, Mr. Wilbur Sunderland, Mr. Pasher and Mr. H. McHugh for the transportation to and from the camp, and also Mr. Henry, who so generously gave the boys candy. The visitors at the camp were Mr. and Mrs. Drago, Mr. and Mrs. Williams and their son Todd, Mr. and Mrs. McHugh and family, and the chairman of the Council, Mr. Arthur Bodien. The officers at Camp Snipe were Alvin Brauns and Woodrow Olson, who are the leaders of the two Cub packs and Chester Smith, the Scoutmaster.

Due to the increasing number of Cubs in Daly City, it has become necessary to organize a new unit. The new unit meets at the church located at Vista Grand and Santa Barbara avenues. It opened with a large attendance, and with a few words from Mr. Bodien, the boys started the routine of the Cub work.

So that the boys may have the proper equipment, and that they may help to turn the wheel of progress that Daly City has started to revolve, a benefit dance and entertainment is to be given by the Council at the Daly City auditorium on October 3, at 8 P. M. This is for your boy. You should be interested.

PARENT-TEACHER WORKERS' LUNCHEON AND CONFERENCE
Last Friday a group of Parent-Teacher workers met at the home of their fourth vice-president, Mrs. Lillian Landini, of Winchester street, and enjoyed a delightful luncheon.

After the luncheon, plans and programs for the coming year were discussed, also P. T. A. progress as related to the four associations located here in the northern section of the county.

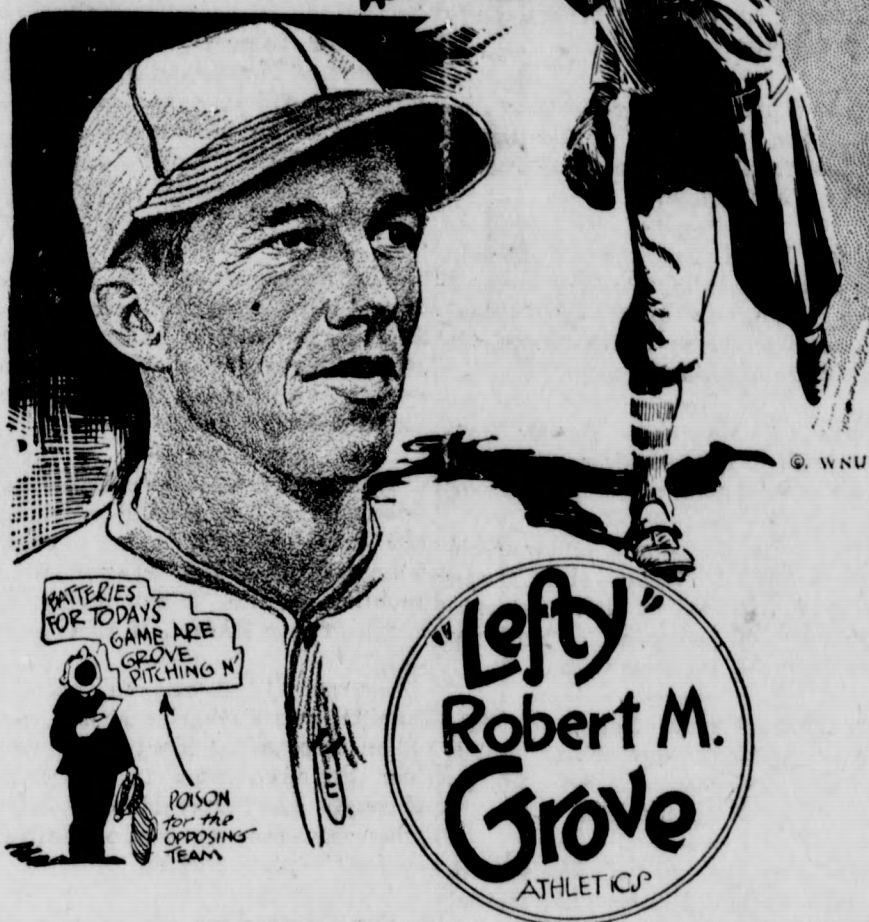

Among those who enjoyed Mrs. Landini's hospitality were Mrs. J. R. Spann, Seventeenth District president; Mrs. R. F. Schutes, chairman of motion pictures; Mrs. M. M. Elder, chairman of recreation; Mrs. E. Riley, chairman of citizenship; Mrs. C. Mc-

PREPARING FOR TANFORAN MEET

It will not be long before thoroughbreds will be showing their speed at Tanforan. All the track burning will be in the mornings for awhile. Contests for "blood" races in the afternoon begin Friday, November 6. On Monday, September 2, the course will be in readiness for training operations.

Rivalry of other seasons among owners of large establishments to be the first to unload their strings at the San Bruno siding is as keen as ever. At present many of the stables that have made history at former sessions at Tanforan are at Lincoln Fields, Saratoga, in Kentucky and down at Del Monte.

John W. Marchbank, owner of Heather Farm, takes pride in shipping to Tanforan early and it may be his home-breds, or at least the Western band, will be the "pioneers" again in arriving at the picturesque plant on the peninsula. His De Swasey, winner of the Pacific Coast Breeders Association Handicap last fall, Givanna, Chepera, and others are doing plenty of fast running on the Chicago wheel.

Nellie Custis, which won the San Francisco Handicap at Tanforan last fall, recently earned brackets at Hawthorne. The game daughter of Sir Barton is no longer in the Audley Farm string, having been lost to trainer Kay Spence through the claiming process.

The San Mateo Handicap winner Tonto Rock is at Imperial Beach enjoying daily dips into the ocean. Owner Stuart Polk hopes the briny water of the sea will make the son of Trap Rock as sound of limb as any horse in the land.

Horsemen have been notified not to ship to Tanforan unless they have received written notice from the Pacific Coast Breeders Association that their reservations have been accepted.

Dowell, president of Bayshore P. T. A.; Mrs. Joseph Franzien, safety chairman in the department of public welfare; Mrs. Mae Killam, cub editor of the Burlingame Advance-Star, and chairman on juvenile protection; Mrs. Beulah Schilder, cub editor of the San Mateo Times, chairman of legislation; Mrs. Ethel Bolger, president of Crocker Association; Mrs. E. C. Boyle, president of General Pershing; Mrs. G. I. Woodside, president of Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande; Mrs. G. W. McIsaacs, president of Jefferson Union High School; Mrs. Julia Jordan, past president of Crocker; Mrs. Eva Page, past president of Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A.

Mrs. J. Johnson, of Wilson street, entertained a group of friends last Wednesday for an evening of whist. After a brisk game delicious refreshments were served at a very prettily decorated table to the following guests: Mrs. Joy, Mrs. H. Peck, Mrs. I. Core, Mrs. Helen Grantham, Mrs. I. Yates, Mrs. E. C. Boyle, Mrs. B. McCarthy, Mrs. White, and Mrs. I. Roberts.

GREATEST FAIR
SAY THOUSANDS

Hundreds of thousands of enthusiastic visitors this week voted approval of the 1931 California State Fair at Sacramento as the greatest and most comprehensive state exposition ever held. Governor James Rolph opened the Fair officially Saturday, September 5.

In the lavishness of county displays, in the wealth of agricultural and horticultural exhibits, in the great variety of thrilling entertainment features, in the $3,000,000 display of purebred livestock, horses and poultry, in the comprehensive educational exhibits, and in the nation's finest state display of paintings, the Fair excels all previous expositions, according to Charles W. Pain, secretary-manager of the Fair.

Novelty and artistry marks the county displays filling the main horticultural building, making the judging of the booths extremely difficult. The first and second floors of the new grandstand building could not house all the school exhibits, the educational building having been burned last spring. A new structure is planned.

Premiums, prizes and purses for this year's Fair totaled $125,000, the largest amount ever offered at a state exposition. King Horse led all in awards with a grand total of $60,196 offered. With 320 animals entered, the nightly horse show proved the greatest ever held in the West.

Premiums for cattle, swine, sheep and goats totaled $32,330. Nearly $2,000,000 worth of livestock paraded before Governor Rolph on Governor's day, yesterday. The greatest running and harness races in Fair history were staged daily.

In the art gallery in the Women's building, 220 canvasses by California artists were hung, and competed for prizes totaling $750.

The latest models in farm machinery and implements, displayed for the first time, featured the annual tractor and farm implement show in the $100,000 machinery building. The Fair marked the dedication of the $125,000 swine and sheep livestock building, and of the $75,000 poultry structure.

Smiling confidence in California by reason of her diversity of soil and manufactured products, and natural resources formed the motif of the 1931 exposition. "Smiles" was played by the bands, and Governor Rolph gave a gold medal to the champion smiler of the Pacific Slope. The Fair ends tomorrow, September 12.

ENGINEER SIGNS WARRANT FOR COLMA SEWER WORK

The dispute over the cost of the Colma sewer district project which has been a cause of contention before the board of supervisors for some weeks, was finally settled Saturday when County Surveyor James S. James signed the warrant for $131,000 for the sewer assessment. This will allow the contractor, W. J. Toben, to collect from the property owners of the district.

COUNTY OFFICERS
MAY USE OLD JAIL

San Mateo county supervisors last Tuesday inspected the abandoned brick building in Redwood City, once the county jail, with the view of remodeling it to house offices in the overcrowded court house. The members of the board also inspected the former postoffice building on Broadway, offered the board by Redwood City realty men.

That the supervisors must meet a crowded court house situation, and the question of a permanent place for the second Superior Court at once, was pointed out by Supervisor John W. Poole of Redwood City at the morning meeting of the board.

Superior Judge Franklin Swart's present court room, the supervisor's room, is only temporary. If this is to be permanent, it must have a jury box and a jury room, and an office for Judge Swart's chambers.

The tentative plan of the board, it is understood, is to remodel the old jail for offices for the county surveyor, social service commission and the probation officer. Surveyor James S. James' present office would then be turned into chambers for Judge Swart and Swart's present office made into a jury room.

Judge Swart appeared before the supervisors and requested installation of a jury box, which the board voted to do immediately.

A letter was received from the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce at the session of the supervisors Tuesday morning, stating: "It was the belief of the board of directors that much of the criticism directed at the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce might be overcome by appointment of one or more representatives from each city Chamber of Commerce to attend meetings of the county board and participate in the discussions."

"The plan would result in wider knowledge of the work of the county board, and tie it closer to organizations throughout the county," the letter said.

The suggestion was endorsed by members of the board, who instructed the county clerk to notify all chambers of commerce to have a representative present at the meetings of the county board, the first Monday of each month.

SUNDAY SERVICES
AT M. E. CHURCH

On Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Methodist church, there is to be a beautiful and impressive service entitled "A Sunday Evening With Edgar Guest." The pastor announces that "the central theme is to be the Home. We will let our thoughts drift back to those early days of childhood, and we will attempt to glorify our present home. We will be assisted in this by appropriate songs and hymns, and through poems written by Edgar Guest."

An opportunity will be given to members of the congregation to mention or read favorite poems written by this popular author. A warm invitation is extended to all to attend these popular Sunday evening services now being held in the Daly City Methodist church, corner of Vista Grande and Santa Barbara avenues.

Sunday morning the Rev. Roland C. Stahl will preach at 11 o'clock in the Geneva Avenue Methodist church on the subject "The Depression and I."

The ladies of the Daly City Methodist community church will hold their quarterly Mite Box opening this Friday night, September 11, at 8 o'clock. A social time is to be had and refreshments will be served.

SWART ASSIGNED TO AID
TWO ADJOINING COUNTIES

Superior Judge Franklin Swart, newly appointed judge of the second division of San Mateo county's Superior Court, will not occupy the bench at Redwood City regularly during the next four months, it is announced. Judge Swart has been commissioned by the State Judicial Council to try cases in the Santa Clara county court at San Jose, and in Santa Cruz county, between now and Christmas. This means that Judge Swart will not be able to devote his entire time in San Mateo county, where the need for two Superior Courts resulted in his appointment.

Judge Swart said he had been assigned to sit on the bench at San Jose the latter part of this month. He added that the council's order had caused some confusion, since an active calendar had been arranged for his own court.

Judge Swart's salary is partly paid by the state, the rest being paid by Santa Clara and Santa Cruz counties while he is sitting in those courts, he explained.

BOARD APPROVES
AMBULANCE PLAN

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Tuesday adopted a motion ordering the establishment of emergency ambulance and hospital service in this county.

Need of an ambulance service was demonstrated twice within the last ten days, first when James McCarthy, a 16-year-old San Francisco boy, fatally injured, waited more than an hour at Visitation for an ambulance, and again when Giovanni Petri, of San Francisco, was fatally injured by a hit-and-run driver last Saturday night near the same spot.

In the McCarthy case, it is claimed San Francisco emergency hospital service declined to send an ambulance, although the accident happened only a few feet south of the line. The South San Francisco hospital finally ordered an ambulance sent all the way from South San Francisco, quite a distance from the limits of the industrial city.

The supervisors voted to hire the five available private ambulances in the county for public use, and to guarantee payment of all ambulance bills.

In addition the board voted to guarantee payment of twenty-four hours' hospitalization. In other words if a patient brought in from an automobile accident is unable to pay for one day's treatment, the county will pay the bill for him.

If a patient requires more than one day's hospitalization, and is unable to pay, he will be removed to the San Mateo Community hospital.

As a result of the board's action, the five ambulances will be ready to speed to the scene of an auto accident in any part of the county, day or night.

The ambulances now available for emergency calls are located as follows: Mills Memorial hospital, San Mateo; George W. Sneider's undertaking parlors, San Mateo; William Crosby mortuary, Burlingame; Layng & Tinney undertaking parlors, Redwood City; and the South San Francisco hospital, South San Francisco.

LIVELY STEPPERS ARE COMING TO TANFORAN

When race horses are almost invariably "there or thereabouts" in contests on important tracks the fans are not slow in giving those runners plenty of support. A race follower cannot land on a winner every time, but at least he has a thrill from getting "a run for his money" as the saying goes among the rank and file.

Bert Baroni and Bruce Johnson have written out from the East for stalls at the meet to begin at Tanforan, Friday, November 6. It is not stretching things to place them high on the honor roll of horsemen always trying, not that there are not scores of others.

Baroni's mare Nifty and Johnson's Lampblack—he looks just that—furnished more than one tense battle through the front stretches at previous sessions at Tanforan, and it may be history will repeat itself in the early part of November. The old favorites are coming in the first shipments to the course.

Baroni has not been in the game many years, but he has learned fast, mainly by observation and by inquiring into the training methods of successful conditioners. He is not too proud to accept the suggestion of an official, for example, that one of his gallopers needs a let-up, time in which to put on hard flesh for future campaigning. He is not of the type that starts a horse day after day, fit or unfit.

One day at Latonia in the summer Nifty's owner scored a triple, a rare occurrence on a race track. Not only Nifty, but Zida and Wee Drop bounded down in the lead at the imaginary wire.

PICTURE SERMONS
IN GRACE CHURCH

Beginning Sunday evening, September 13, at 7:45, the "Life of Christ" will be shown in stereopticon picture form at Grace Presbyterian church. Colored slides depicting incidents in the life of our Lord will be combined with actual photographs from the land of Palestine. In the morning at the 11 o'clock service, the pastor will preach a sermon on "How Good Should a Christian be." This Presbyterian church is located at Evergreen avenue and Hanover street, and strangers are especially welcome.

Carl Vubrer, of San Francisco, suffered a fractured pelvis when he was thrown from his motorcycle and went under a street car in South San Francisco.

LARGEST LIVING THING

The largest living thing on earth, and probably the oldest, is the General Sherman tree in Sequoia National Park, in California. By precise observations and calculations a committee of engineers determined that this tree was the biggest of the giant redwoods, while the General Grant tree is second in size.

The General Sherman tree has a volume of slightly more than 600,000 board feet of lumber; its height is 272 feet, and its circumference at the ground is 88 feet.

It is estimated that these largest trees are 5,000 or more years old.

"Crackers" First Baked

by Massachusetts Man

As far as any authentic record shows, the first cracker bakery in the United States was that of Theodore Pearson at Newburyport, Mass. He began business in 1792 and his specialty was a large cracker which was known both as a "pilot" and as ship's bread. Joshua Brent was Pearson's first great business rival. He erected an oven for cracker baking at Milton, Mass., in 1801. He was succeeded by many other cracker manufacturers. The crackers were first made by hand. During the years between 1840 and 1895 the mechanical process employed in making crackers underwent a remarkable development. Prior to 1840 the use of machinery in the cracker-making process was practically unknown. Even then the dough was still worked up and put into the oven one piece at a time. Machinery was finally invented which took the dough after it had been prepared by hand and rolled it into a thin sheet which, as it passed over a sort of endless belt, was cut by a stamping machine which works automatically.

Nature Gives Warning in Odors That Offend

It may be regarded as a safe rule to regard offensive odors as associated with poisonous substances. Sewer gas, though not necessarily infectious, is nevertheless known to be harmful because of the poisonous and malarious substances of which it is composed. The deadly carbonous oxide, though itself odorless, is almost invariably associated with other gases which betray its presence. The sense of taste also serves as a protection against poisonous substances. Wholesome substances, with rare exceptions, have neutral, sweet, sweetish or acid flavors. Substances which have bitter, acrid, smarting, nauseating or astringent flavors are usually noxious. So great is our perversity, we actually contaminate and render harmful perfectly wholesome foodstuffs by the addition of pepper, mustard and other hot and irritating substances which Nature warns us against.—Dr. John Harvey Kellogg in Good Health.

Ground Squirrel Economy

Rodent-control experts in the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture often save considerable money for farmers or ranchmen who have rodent pests on their lands. Not long ago a rancher in California had planned to use a fumigant on 4,500 acres in an effort to rid the land of ground squirrels, at an estimated cost of $4,500. On the advice of a biological survey worker, who found that on this particular ranch fumigation would be expensive and unsatisfactory, the rodents were controlled by a specially prepared poison mixture of steam-rolled oats, at a cost of only $200.

Tropical Fish

The difference between a sailfish and a flying fish is that the flying fish flies, after a fashion, and the sailfish does not. Flying fishes, of which there are a number of species, are small and light but have long wing-like pectoral fins. The fish works up speed in the water, throws itself into the air, and the "wings" are able to carry it for some distance. The sailfish is a very large deep sea fish, related to the swordfish, but having teeth, and characterized by the large, high dorsal fin, which is suggestive of a sail.

One Forest Fire Cause

In Forests and Mankind explanation as to why forest fires occur so frequently in areas that have already been burned over is given: "Fires in a sense brew fires. The effect of each fire, no matter how light, is to prepare the land for another, since each successive burning leaves dead trees and charred limbs behind it, that under the hot summer sun dry out like tinder and furnish more and more fuel for the flames that follow, until at last the land becomes a barren waste, unfit for tree growth—unfit for anything but to serve as a reminder and a warning."

Chose Good Place to Fall

A meteorite crashed to earth in Lenesel province, in central Siberia some years ago. It exploded as it neared the earth and illuminated the country for nearly 500 miles. The heat from this body could be felt for a distance of 300 miles. It was the largest falling star in history. If it had struck New York city, every building and subway would have been destroyed and every bit of life wiped out.

Fast Work

Mike was engaged to do a job of painting for Mr. Smith. After a while he came in saying the job was completed and asked for his money. "But, Mike, I wanted two coats on that building. I'll pay you after the second coat," said Mr. Smith. "You've got it," said Mike. "I mixed the first coat with the paint for the second and put on both coats at the same time. Speed is my motto."

Running Away

Many explorers, so highly praised for braving jungle heat and ice floods are really "escapists" who have found these physical pains easier to endure than the emotional stress of staying at home and getting along with their wives and brothers and neighbors.—Country Home.

GETTING WORK DONE

Men were digging a ditch in a wet, sticky soil that was in danger of flooding.

"All out!" the young foreman shouted one morning.

The men were out like a flash. "All in!" the foreman shouted, and the men tumbled back into the ditch, thinking that the call had been a false alarm.

"All out!" came another shout. Out tumbled the men.

"All in!" And they disappeared once more in the hole, grumbling a little.

After half-a-dozen repetitions of this business the men became angry and asked the foreman what he meant by it.

"What's the game?" one demanded. "There's no water coming."

The foreman smiled.

"I know there isn't," he said, "but I find that you fellows take out more dirt on your boots than you do on your shovels."—Forbes Magazine.

HUNTERS SHOULD BE CAREFUL

Be sure that your intended dove is not a homing pigeon!

A letter was received by the Division of Fish and Game from W. E. Mabey, 1824 University avenue, Berkeley, which said that homing racing pigeons are being shot and mutilated during training and racing by the careless hunter.

The letter further states that "during the 1930 young bird series there were some valuable birds that came home, flying distances ranging up to 500 miles, with their wings and breasts pierced by shot." Some of these birds are valued at more than $100, pigeon club officials declared, and their worth as messengers in time of war or other emergencies is immeasurable.

This is the time of year when many shotgun hunters are in the field, according to Division officials. Doves can be easily distinguished from pigeons by their general appearance.

BUILDERS OF CALIFORNIA

5 of the 8 largest clay products manufacturers in California are depositors in Bank of America

Clay, shaped on an Indian's thigh

MOLDED on the thighs of Indian workers and baked over charcoal fires, much of the original roofing tile on California's missions is well preserved after 150 years!

Modern builders, too, use tile and brick in many forms for permanence and beauty.

But the tedious methods of the Padres have given way to ingenious molds, special machinery and white-hot kilns.

And now 5,000 Californians are engaged in producing 30 million dollars' worth of clay products yearly.

This industry finds Bank of America's statewide service particularly adapted to its needs.

Large concerns simplify the handling of payrolls by depositing funds at branches near their plants.

After selected clays are mined and blended, weeks may elapse before finished products are ready for sale. Funds advanced by this Bank aid in financing production and distribution.

Another appreciated service is the assistance of branch managers in bringing about friendly business contacts throughout the state.

The same advantages that have led 5 of the 8 largest clay products manufacturers in California to choose this Bank, are available to you—through a convenient Bank of America branch in your community.

Ranger Joseph Fordyce of the Sequoia National Park service has been chosen from a long list of applicants for position as ranger in the National Park of Hawaii. The appointment is considered a distinct promotion in the service.

During July the Veterans' Welfare Board acquired homes and farms for California veterans at a total cost of $1,281,000. Gov. Rolph was informed by Allen B. Bixby, chairman of the board. The board acquired 263 homes costing $1,218,850, and eleven farms at a cost of $62,150. Bixby said $8,000,000 in bonds has been issued of the $20,000,000 authorization voted last November, and the veterans' welfare finance committee recently decided to sell another block of $6,000,000 worth of bonds on October 1.

Records given Gov. Rolph showed that of the 7409 persons in Folsom and San Quentin penitentiaries 3555, or 47 per cent, are under 30 years of age. Daniel J. O'Brien, director of penology, reported to the Governor that on July 31, there were 4897 inmates in San Quentin prison, 125 of them women, and 2623 in Folsom. This is an increase of 111 prisoners over the preceding month. Persons on parole from the two prisons totaled 2790. The earnings of parolees during last July amounted to $126,809.76.

Seven years after the approval of El Capitan dam bond issues by the voters the San Diego City Council took its first step toward the construction of El Capitan Dam. H. N. Savage, hydraulic engineer, was ordered by the Council to prepare plans and specifications immediately for an earth and rock fill dam at the damsite. The resolution sponsored by Councilman Maire, called for plans for a dam not less than 197 feet high. This will cost about $5,000,000 and will yield about 11.6 million gallons daily delivered to the University Heights reservoir, according to former estimates by Savage.

If one thinks inspectors at California plant quarantine inspection stations have nothing to do they should read a few of the famed and little known bugs found in many of the 675,052 automobiles stopped at the border during 1930. A report just issued by the Department of Agriculture shows the interception of prairie dogs, lizards, ground squirrels, scorpions, centipedes, horse flies, camel crickets, flesh maggots, yellow jackets, sawflies, wasps, ants and scores of other more or less common insects, animals, reptiles and mites. From the ships touching at California ports were taken cargo and passengers' baggage carrying cockroaches, beetles, weevils, caterpillars, worms, butterflies, ants and other insects from about every country in the world.

Regardless of safety warnings that have been broadcast from time to time, hunting accidents are on the increase in California, according to figures tabulated by the Division of Fish and Game. In a table just completed it is revealed that 127 persons were the victims of hunting accidents during the season of 1930. This is an increase of eighteen in comparison with the season of 1929. The table also shows that during the past season thirty-three persons were killed and ninety-four were wounded. In the number of self-inflicted accidents seventeen proved fatal and fifty-eight were non-fatal. Sixteen were killed in accidents inflicted by others and twenty-six were non-fatal. Nine persons were killed while hunting deer and eighteen severely wounded. The table also reveals that nine persons were killed while hunting unknown game and forty-two were wounded.

Humanitarian agencies of California's state government are administering to an increasing army of dependents, their ranks swelled by unemployment. Marking one of the most extensive relief programs yet undertaken by the state, financial aid was being extended to 7980 needy aged, 1235 blind and 11,761 destitute children. Adults and children receiving state aid and total funds expended on them monthly in representative California counties follow: Los Angeles: Aged, 1383 cases; $17,653; blind, 415 cases, $7373; child aid, 2407 cases. San Francisco: Aged, 921 cases, $12,492; blind, 166 cases, $2653; child aid, 1746 cases. Alameda: Aged, 836 cases, $10,686; blind, 172 cases, $3309; child aid, 1288 cases. Ventura: Aged, 74 cases, $897; blind, 12 cases, $205; child aid, 188 cases. San Mateo: Aged, 54 cases, $555; blind, 8 cases, $97; child aid, 87 cases. Contra Costa: Aged, 66 cases, $787; blind, 5 cases, $65; child aid, 194 cases. Orange: Aged, 109 cases, $1053; blind, 8 cases, $87; child aid, 149 cases.

State Attorney-General U. S. Webb having approved the State appropriation of $400,000 for flood control in the Santa Ana River watershed, Cucamonga Basin Protective Association members foresee early resumption of the organization's work in developing spreading grounds and building retaining walls in Cucamonga Canyon, officials of the association have indicated. Cucamonga Basin Protective Association was organized to insure protection in the near-by canyons against floods during years of heavy rain, and to catch mountain water run-off.

According to an announcement made recently from the Controller's office at the University of California at Los Angeles, bids are to be opened on September 11 for the construction of the two proposed gymnasium buildings on the campus. It is estimated that the total cost of this improvement will approximate $1,000,000 and construction work is expected to start before October 1.

Atty-Gen. Webb recently reiterated his opinion that wage schedules for all types of workmen to be employed on the project must accompany the call for bids for work on public projects as a result of the new State law. Webb's ruling answered a request of Dist. Atty. Darrah of Stockton, who asked if such wage scales must be specified in bids on a proposed San Joaquin County Hospital. Darrah offered an alternative of a county resolution specifying wage scales, which will be referred to in the calls for bids.

Greater protection from fire is assured inmates of California institutions, according to a report just made to Gov. Rolph by Dr. J. M. Toner, Director of Institutions. Director Toner said that arrangements have been made with the State Fire Marshal through the Department of Industrial Relations to provide a fire marshal who will be continually engaged in making the rounds of State institutions, recommending procedure for elimination of fire hazards and supplying such data as are necessary for the purchase of adequate fire-protection equipment. "A number of recommendations have already been received from the State Fire Marshal's office relative to our equipment needs," said Dr. Toner. "Funds have been provided in the budgets of the Mendocino and Napa State hospitals and the Sonoma State Home for the erection of suitable fire stations to house pumping engines, which will be purchased."

From all reports received of late, a real revival of the hog raising industry in Antelope Valley is on the way. Numerous ranchers, it is reported, are adding well-bred foundation hog stock to their ranch stock. About ten years ago the raising of hogs seemed about to become one of the leading industries in the valley, but a cholera epidemic almost killed it. Modern methods of animal husbandry and a better understanding of disease prevention have restored confidence, it is stated by several breeders, and many of them are equipping parts of their ranches for a new trial of swine. The Rene Olin ranch in the Rogers district is being made into a hog-breeding center on a large commercial scale and numerous young sows have been bred for September and October farrow. A number of other ranchers report that within the next six months a large number of good breeding animals will be introduced on various valley farms.

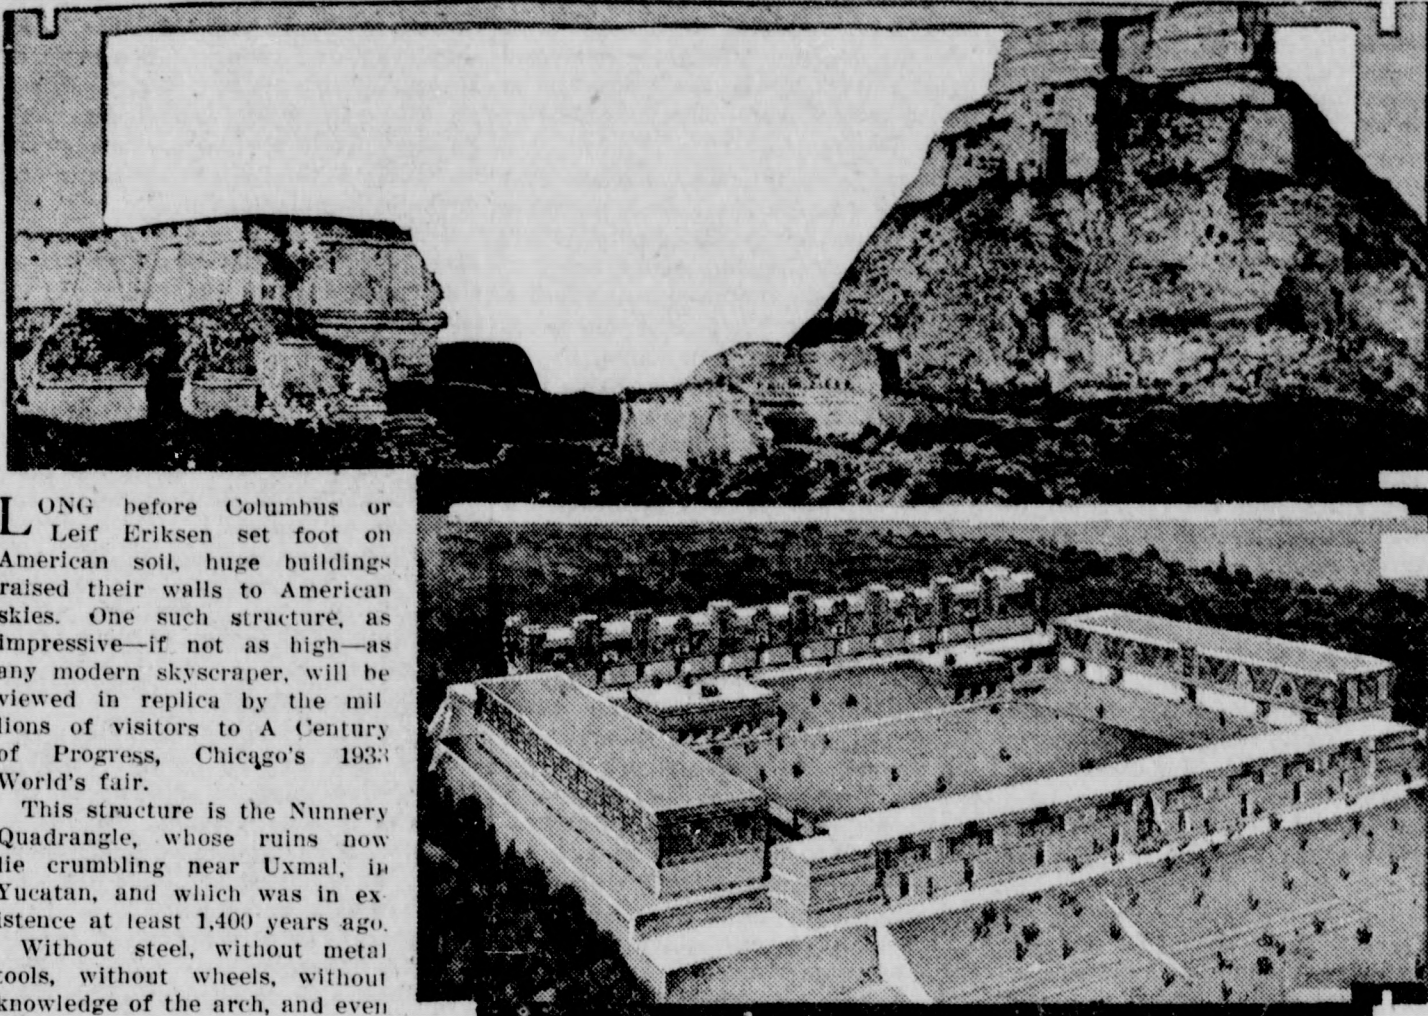

Public Health Service experts are noting with keen interest how lightly the annual visitation of infantile paralysis has this year touched California. Scene last year of a heavy onslaught, the western State had but two cases at the last weekly report as compared with New York's 600. The 1930 poliomyelitis record in California ran: May, fifty-nine cases; June, 210; July, 448; August, 232; September, 253; October, 363; November, 146; December, seventy-six. In decided contrast is a 1931 sample: April, twenty-two cases; May, ten; June, twenty-six; July, twenty. Physicians of the Public Health Service believe this record may bear out the latest theory on the disease—a theory important in its treatment—that many individuals have the disease sufficiently to immunize them from further attack without its ever being detected. Thus a large portion of California might have met the disease sufficiently to build up a resistance against it, during last year's sweeping visitation.

Pink lemons have been found growing on a tree in California. However, the tree is a rare specimen and the United States Department of Agriculture warns that there is little chance of the pink lemonade industry switching to the new lemons for raw material. Pink lemons were first exhibited at the National Orange show this year. They came from a tree in Burbank and so far as known, the tree is a bud sport (or freak) of the Variegated Eureka lemon, which was developed from a limb variation of the Eureka lemon, discovered in 1911. The Variegated Eureka lemon trees are not as productive as the normal Eureka lemon trees and they are grown chiefly for ornamental purposes. The pink fruited lemon tree is identical in appearance to the Variegated Eureka tree, but as the fruit approaches ripeness it develops a decidedly pink color in the rind, flesh, and juice. Budwood from the pink lemon tree has been inserted in sour orange seedlings and the resulting trees will be studied to see if the pink lemon can be further propagated. Department specialists declare the pink lemon is another illustration of the occurrence of striking bud variations in this variety of citrus fruit.

Nunnery Quadrangle of Uxmal Is to Be Reproduced for Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition

LONG before Columbus or Leif Eriksen set foot on American soil, huge buildings raised their walls to American skies. One such structure, as impressive—if not as high—as any modern skyscraper, will be viewed in replica by the millions of visitors to A Century of Progress, Chicago's 1933 World's fair.

This structure is the Nunnery Quadrangle, whose ruins now lie crumbling near Uxmal, in Yucatan, and which was in existence at least 1,400 years ago. Without steel, without metal tools, without wheels, without knowledge of the arch, and even without beasts of burden, the ancient Mayans reared this imposing structure, 79 feet at its extreme height, in what is now jungle, as an abode and as a temple for their vestal virgins. The nunnery occupies about 3½ acres of ground and consists of four great rectangular halls surrounding a vast court.

The quadrangle rises from the top of a terrace 15 feet high, and one enters the courtyard from the south through a corbelled vault. To the right is the East building, of simple design. To the left stands the West building, its ornate facade decorated with the intertwining bodies of the feathered serpent god, Kukulkan. Opposite the entrance a broad stairway, flanked by minor temples, ascends to the North building, 26 feet high.

Masters of the art of false perspective, the ancient builders of the quadrangle tapered the north ends of the East and West buildings so as to give the court an exaggerated appearance of size. It is exactly the same principle, on an infinitely smaller scale, employed by designers of the ultra-modern table in the trustees' room of the exposition.

The facades lean forward so as to throw into still deeper shadow the deeply undercut decorations. In the bright tropical sunshine the grotesquely carved and painted masks of the Mayan gods glare down with fearful intensity.

In this temple and in a series of primitive Indian villages, the story of man in the Western hemisphere will be told. Arranging the details of this thrilling drama of the ages is a committee of world-famed savants headed by Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, professor of anthropology at the University of Chicago.

Our illustration shows, above, the ruins of the East building of Nunnery Quadrangle and the Pyramid of the Magician; and, below, a sketch of the Nunnery Quadrangle as it will be reproduced.

JUST SUPPOSE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHEN I was a little lad,
Oh, the many things I had!
Things I hadn't, goodness knows,
Just the things you just suppose.
Yes, the wealth I used to own;
Ev'ry glitter of a stone,
Ev'ry rock that used to shine,
Made me sure there was a mine,
Something gorgeous, something grand
Underneath our pasture land.

Father used to laugh at me;
Mother, gentle as could be,
Even smiled a little bit
While she frowned at Father's wit.
"Just suppose," I used to say,
"There's a mine there, anyway,
Wouldn't we be rich a lot?"
"Yes," he'd say, "but, son, there's not."
Yet my answer was to his,
"Yes, but just suppose there is?"

Well, I've wandered far away,
Many both the mile and day,
And I know that Dad was right.
Yet I find that life's delight
Is not what we're sure about,
Added, proved and figured out,
Mortal friendship, woman's kiss,
And a thousand things like this,
Happier than one who knows
Are the ones who just suppose.

THOUGHTS ON COOKERY

THE cook who wastes nothing but serves her food daintily and in an appetizing manner, is a real genius and her talents are in constant demand.

The artist cook, who really enjoys working with her food materials, enjoys her color combinations as well as an artist who sits before his picture with his palette and paint.

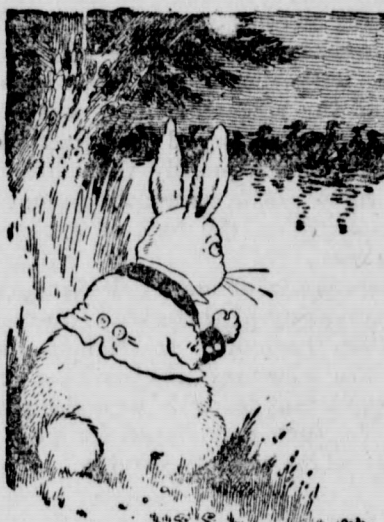

The cook has as vast a field to show her art as does the artist. Where do we get such beautiful color material as in fruits and vegetables? The bloom on the peach and the plum, the

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

PETER RABBIT KEEPS GUARD

NOW there are some people who think only of themselves and in times of danger have no thought of others. But Peter Rabbit is not that kind. When Peter is frightened he always tries to warn others who may be near. He does it by thumping the ground with those stout hind feet of his. Those thumps can be heard a long way by those whose ears are near the ground.

As Peter sat near the pond of Paddy the Beaver, deep in the Green Forest, thinking over all the things which Honker the Goose had told of the Great Woods of the Far North, and of those who live there, he didn't for a single little minute forget to keep his ears open. He knew that he would be safer in the dear Old Briar Patch, but he wanted to see more of Honker and perhaps in the morning, after a good night's rest, Honker would tell more stories.

So Peter sat as still as still can be, thinking over what he had heard about Glutton the Wolverine and Flatbush the Moose, and wondering what it would be like to be able to fly like Honker the Goose. He looked up through the treetops at the twinkling stars and then over at the pond where there seemed to be stars, too, twinkling in the water. Where the Black Shadows had stretched themselves across the water he could just see what looked like twelve blacker shadows. He knew that they were Honker and his followers.

"It must be great to be a leader like Honker, and have all the rest obey you," thought Peter, who, you know, never has been a leader in his life. "He must feel very anxious when he picks out a place to spend the night when he is making these long journeys. It isn't like stopping in places that you know all about. Now he never has stopped here before, so how does he know what dangers there may be? Of course Buster Bear and Paddy have told him that he will be perfectly safe here for one night anyway, and of course sleeping out there on the water, there isn't anybody he fears. It isn't like sleeping on shore where some one may creep up and surprise you."

A long time Peter sat there. By and by he noticed that some of those sleeping geese were drifting nearer the shore. It trouble him, he didn't know just why. Then quite suddenly into his head popped a thought. Suppose, just suppose, Old Man Coyote or Granny or Reddy Fox should happen to come along and find one of them asleep close to shore! Peter all at once felt that he ought to keep guard, which means to watch for danger.

"If I were in a strange place," thought he, "I surely would feel better if some one who knew all the dangers kept watch while I slept. Of course Honker won't know until he wakes up that I have kept watch, and perhaps I won't tell him then. I'm not doing it for his thanks or so that he'll think any the more of me, but because—because—well, because I like that feeling inside whenever I've done something for some one else. Hello! What is that moving over there?"

The Old Gardener Says:

GARDEN makers who have peach trees which are infested with borers, a very common trouble, will be interested in a chemical bearing the mouth-filling name of paradichlorobenzene, which has been shortened to PDB for common use. This chemical is spread around the trees a few inches from the trunks but never allowed to come in contact with the bark. It is covered with soil banked up in a mound five inches deep, and after two or three weeks this earth is removed. The treatment is remarkably effective but should not be given to trees under three years old, and must be confined to peach trees only.

THE ROAD TO PROSPERITY

San Mateo county can accept laurels on the fact that the builders of the county aim to maintain wage scales, while other communities are cutting, or attempting to cut.

The San Francisco Builders' Exchange is now urging the San Francisco Industrial Association to cut wages. This the association has refused to do, declaring the present scale will be in effect until the first of next year. A new wage board is to be named in the near future to outline a new scale to serve during 1932. It is possible that some cuts will be made, but we believe they will not be of a radical nature.

San Mateo county builders, rather than cut, pursue the "increase" line, and maintain the present standard of wages.

This is one way, and a sure way, out of the business depression. Wage cuts will do more to hamper a return to prosperity than any other single move. The well paid worker is an aid to the community, as his wages go to aid the butcher, the baker, and all down the line. When the worker is poorly paid, the merchant can not hope for a profitable business.

Wages in twenty crafts listed in a recent publication which has come to our notice, are higher in San Mateo county than the wage established by the Impartial Wage Board of the Industrial Association of San Francisco. And San Mateo county should be proud of that fact.

If the New York gunmen keep up their recent pace, Chicago will have to look to her laurels.

The country many not be going "Red," but there is an increasing demand for red ink.

LEGION TO FIGHT FIRE

The American Legion, Department of California, has made fire prevention one of its permanent activities. It is organizing committees on Fire Prevention and Public Safety throughout the state, and has instructed its national committeeman to present a resolution at the next national convention, at Detroit, to extend the fight against fire to every Legion Post in the country. In aggressive support of this resolution, the California Legion on August 22 conducted a national radio broadcast, sponsored by the Board of Fire Underwriters of the Pacific.

One leading authority states that the entry of the Legion into this work is the greatest single impetus ever given the cause of fire prevention. It is earnestly to be hoped, on the part of the general public, that the resolution to place the movement on a national basis will succeed. This nation's disgraceful annual fire loss is largely due to public apathy and indifference. Too many of us regard fires as being the other fellow's business, not realizing that we all pay for it, in higher insurance rates, taxes, unemployment, loss of business and so on, whether our own property is burned or not.

Each year some ten thousand lives and half a billion dollars in property values are destroyed by fire. Here is a genuine "red menace" that threatens the life and security of every citizen. The example of the Legion of California is a fine one that should be followed by every organization interested in the public welfare.

A Vienna newspaper is trying out college freshmen on its editorial staff. But that's old stuff over here, judging from some of the editorials we read in the big papers.

A REAL GRIEVANCE

Government establishments, including the Navy, come in for a good deal of criticism from time to time, some of which is unwarranted. But a real grievance seems to be voiced by John Duys, president of the associated cigar manufacturers and leaf tobacco dealers, who has protested against stocking the commissariats of Navy vessels with cigars from Havana, Cuba.

When told by Navy officials that the rule that the Navy shall purchase only American goods, provided the prices are reasonable, applies only to ships in United States waters, Mr. Duys wrote the Senators of nine great cigar-producing states, saying:

"The obvious intention of that rule, it seems to me, is to effect the spending of Navy funds with the people who supply those funds, and this intention is largely invalidated if naval vessels are free to purchase large stores of commodities in foreign ports and bring them back to home ports."

Mr. Duys also pointed out that the American cigar industry is paying $21,000,000 yearly in revenue taxes alone, a considerable portion of which goes to the support of the Navy. He also notes that American cigars are made from the choicest tobaccos to be found anywhere, under conditions of manufacture which are unequalled for skill and sanitation, and sold at prices which challenge pre-war values.

In a time of depression like this it seems that the Navy might well confine its purchases to commodities of American manufacture. It would not be amiss for other trade groups to follow the example of the alert leader of the cigar manufacturers and urge the purchase of American goods exclusively for Navy use.

MOTHER OF MONARCHS

When in 1764 Letitia Ramolino, a rather obscure Corsican girl, married Carlos Bonaparte, an assessor, at the age of 14, there was little in the occurrence to indicate the far reaching influence that was to follow their union.

It was not particularly strange that 13 children were to be born to them, but it is remarkable that of the 13 four were destined to become emperors or kings and two to become queens.

The most famous, of course, was Napoleon Bonaparte, who became emperor of France, and whose name fills more pages of history than that of any other mortal who ever lived. He was the second child.

Joseph, the eldest, became king of Spain; Jerome was king of Westphalia, and Louis was king of Holland. Of the daughters, Maria became queen of Naples, and Elisa became queen of Tuscana.

Two other children held lesser rank, Lucien becoming prince of Canino, and Marie Pauline becoming duchess of Guastalla.

Thus Letitia Ramolino has become known to the world as "the mother of monarchs." It might be imagined, therefore, that hers was a happy life—but not so. She was often poverty-stricken, and lived to see all her royal children shorn of their power. When she died at the age of 86, the great Napoleon had been dead 15 years; all her other children had lost their royal prerogatives, and while several survived her they had ceased to be factors in public affairs.

But in spite of all that, Letitia Ramolino gave to the world a progeny whose activities did more to change the course of events than that of any other mother who ever lived.

WHY NOT USE THEM?

From time to time we see accounts of various new mechanical inventions which appear to fill a real need, but those who might profit by them seem slow to put them to use.

For example, we have been reading for a long time about a new automobile jack attached to the car, whereby any wheel may be lifted by manipulating a gadget from the driver's seat. But we have never soon one on any car.

Again, we know that there has been invented a device which prevents stalling of an automobile—certainly a most desirable invention. Many lives have been lost by the stalling of an automobile engine while crossing a railroad track or under other emergency conditions.

Many engines have the disconcerting habit of dying when slowed down or stopped in traffic, and this habit often has the most serious consequences.

It looks as if enterprising manufacturers would eagerly adopt a device which could be depended upon to avoid this danger. Car owners would certainly be glad to have this protection.

What is the good of useful inventions unless we use them?

A Spanish bullfighter was killed by a thrown pop bottle, which illustrates that his occupation is almost as hazardous as that of a baseball umpire.

Some are trying to do away with crime; others are trying to get away with it—and with appreciably better success.

WHAT WOMEN READ

"Don't tell me the younger generation is frivolous, scatter-brained or empty-headed," says Miss Lillian Lewis, librarian of the A. W. A. club-house in New York City. The only way I have of judging women who live in the club-house is through the books they read, and young women between 20 and 30 are reading heavy stuff—history, philosophy and foreign languages—while the older women want 'summer fiction,' light, entertaining books by popular authors."

Although this is not true in every case, of course, Miss Lewis finds that there is a very pronounced trend on the part of younger women to discard fiction for the more vigorous type of reading found in non-fiction. It is not unusual to have a mother and daughter leave the library, mother with "Cakes and Ale" under her arm, and daughter already scanning her "History of England."

"Another interesting point," she continues, "is that as soon as our fiction reader has selected her book, she hurries out of the library, never stopping a moment to look around and enjoy the beauty of it, while her younger sister who reads Plato and thinks nothing of going through twenty-five pages of Proust, in the French, in one evening, lingers a while, as if she just loved being there where, once during her busy day, she will find quiet and dignity."

Although these remarks of the A. W. A.'s librarian are not of vital significance, it is interesting to note that young women, most of whom are employed during the day, find their mental relaxation in books which the majority of us deem over our heads.

"DON'TS" FOR WRITERS

Most advice to writers consists of long lists of "don'ts." And if you ask us, if we were really giving advice, we should embody it in one big "don't." It would be: Don't pay too much attention to lists of "don'ts."

Obviously, a writer should have a working knowledge of the language, including familiarity with the rules of syntax, and at least a nodding acquaintance with rhetoric, and some other phases of the phrase-making art, the names of which have for the moment escaped us.

The beginner should stick rather closely to the rules, at least until he learns how to break them effectively. Adherence to a severe style is a safe course until one really has something to say. Then, if ever such a thing happens, it is a good idea to say it in the most direct and forceful manner possible, even if a rule or two gets smashed in the process.

On the other hand, rules should not be broken merely for the sake of hearing their bones crack. If the thought can be conveyed attractively and effectively by a strict observance of all the niceties, well and good. But some writers appear to be more concerned with displaying their knowledge of the rules than they are with expressing the alleged idea they have in mind. Consequently their productions have about as much animation and warmth as the text of a chattel mortgage.

Language is primarily designed for the expression of thought, or the concealment thereof. In either case, rules are a means and not the end. The important thing is to make plain what you are driving at, as well as that at which you are driving.

UTILITY REGULATION

One of the stock arguments of those who favor government operation of public utilities is that state regulation has "broken down" and is inadequate for the protection of the public. But in one state, at least, an impartial investigation has found the public service commission functioning effectively in the public interest.

In Alabama a searching investigation of public utility affairs was recently made by a joint committee of the Legislature, composed of eight members. In a report signed by seven of the eight committeemen it was said:

"We unhesitatingly say that the interests of the people of Alabama are being protected by the public service commission. We believe that those who criticize the acts of the commission do so either because they do not actually know and understand the facts, or they criticize without regard to such facts."

The committee also stated that the Alabama Power Company, the state's largest utility, was assessed for taxation at a higher percentage on its value than any other property in the state; that it was not earning a fair return on its investment, and that it paid out in taxes approximately 11 cents out of every dollar it collected from its customers.

So, it appears that Alabama is in no imminent danger of being swallowed up by that undefined entity which radical politicians call the "power trust."

An English church court has decided that the serpent really spoke to Eve. Thank goodness, that's settled.

Don't begrudge Germany her moratorium. Think what she would have gotten if she had won the war.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.
John Temple Grave II, editorial columnist of the Birmingham, Alabama, Age-Herald, says:

That if Pollyanna were interviewed on the world-wide business clouds, she could line them very handsomely in silver. She could say that the depression has instructed nations in mutual dependence, is teaching them the futility of many things, and presenting them, apparently with the most persuasive arguments ever yet offered for disarmament.

She could say it has shown the economic world that employees are customers, that buyers are sellers, and that even competitors, in some sense, are co-sharers of a common economic lot.

She could say it has proven to the public that machines are not infallible or fool-proof, that big business men are not necessarily great economists or statesmen, and that prodigality, gambling and greed can ruin the best laid plans of eternal prosperity.

She could say that the loss in material values has been matched in many instances by a gain in spiritual ones, and that for the thousands who are worrying over declines in their incomes there are other thousands who have reconciled themselves to these declines and discovered in the newly forced simplicity of their living a certain blessed release from the plague of too many possessions.

The London woman who kept her marriage a secret for twenty years must have had a mighty sorry looking husband.

An obliging contemporary says: "We are always glad to print obituaries for our readers."

Another paradox is that when a thing is swallowed up it goes down.

MOTORISTS ENTER PROTEST

Protest against the use of gasoline tax funds for bond interest or redemption has been voiced by the California State Automobile Association in a letter to the board of supervisors of San Francisco. These funds, consisting of the counties' share of the three-cent gasoline tax, are limited by law specifically to street and road construction, maintenance and repair, according to the Association's legal department.

"Use of these funds for bond interest or redemption, even though the bond proceeds have been used for street and highway construction and maintenance, is not sanctioned by law," said Percy E. Towne, general counsel for the Automobile Association and a member of its board of directors.

"Such use constitutes a serious curtailment of current street and highway construction and maintenance programs. The streets of San Francisco should not be neglected by a diversion of gas tax funds to uses not contemplated by law.

"The intent of the law in providing the counties with a refund of a share of the gasoline tax according to automobile registrations is to provide for street and road construction within the counties to keep pace with growing traffic requirements.

"To deprive current programs of needed financing to meet bond or interest redemption charges merely postpones a day of reckoning. It results in delaying needed new construction and retarding maintenance and repair work to the detriment of streets and roads. It is bound to lead ultimately to the need of another bond issue 'to catch up' with increasing traffic demands.

"For these reasons and in line with the general policy of the Automobile Association to oppose diversion of gas tax funds to purposes other than those specified by law, we are protesting against this contemplated diversion of funds."

Justice J. W. Robertson, of Glasgow, has barred the use of the words "lady" and "gentleman" in his court, and ordered that witnesses must say "woman" and "man."

Electric light and power are available to every town in the United States of 5,000 or more population, and 97 per cent of the smaller ones are supplied with current.

The number of books published last year in England broke all records, there being 9,907 new books and 5,486 new editions, translations and pamphlets.

SEEKING THE WAY OUT

For some years agriculture has been seeking for a way out of its predicament. Now it begins to look as if it may have found it in the movement towards co-operation.

At present some 12,000 farmers' co-operative associations in this country transact an annual business of $2,500,000,000, according to Vera McCrea of the Dairymen's League Co-operative Association, a leader in the Eastern field. Many of these have centralized their sales activity in large organizations doing an annual business of between ten and one hundred million dollars. Their membership represents an appreciable percentage of the 6,500,000 American farms.

Agriculture is in pretty much the same situation as are many manufacturing industries. Exactly as industry has solved many of its problems through production efficiency and distribution, so must agriculture solve its problems. A ready market and profitable prices for goods can only be had when farmers unite to place themselves on a bargaining footing with dealers to whom they sell. The bigger the business, the better the bargaining power—and the fast growth of farm co-operatives indicates that agriculture is appreciating that fact and is developing accordingly.

AUTOMOBILE TAXES TOO HIGH

Figures showing that motor vehicle property pays taxes twelve times as heavy as those on rural real estate and seven times as heavy as those on urban real estate are viewed with increasing concern by the automobile industry. The actual facts are that the total tax on a car, over a seven year period, amounts to 101.1 per cent of its value. This compares with 16.8 per cent for urban land and 10.3 per cent for improved farm land. On the basis of the 1930 tax, the automobile would pay 128.3 per cent of its average value, compared with 16.8 per cent for urban land and 11 per cent for farm land during a similar seven-year period.—Forbes Magazine.

POOR RADIO PROGRAMS

It must be obvious to the most casual radio listener that the standard of programs, which has never been high, is steadily deteriorating. One recent writer declares, with rather convincing argument to back up his contention, that radio is committing suicide.

While it is true that there may still be heard a few high-class programs, if one will exercise due diligence in picking them out, for the most part the offerings on the air are not worth listening to by anyone possessing intelligence above that of the average.

Regardless of individual tastes most persons buy radio sets for the purpose of entertainment. The form of entertainment most suitable for radio is music, especially instrumental music. Speeches, lectures and so-called educational features may appeal to some, but all these are available in unlimited quantity by means of the printed page.

Then there are the long-winded advertising harangues which appear to be constantly increasing in length and stupidity. How any business concern can expect to build good will through such infliction upon a long suffering public is hard to understand.

Bare legs are disturbing to reformers and stocking manufacturers.

OF HOLIDAY CRASHES

Two men met death and several other persons are recovering from injuries as a result of automobile accidents on the peninsula over the holiday week end.

Thomas W. Atkins, Jr., 25, San Francisco printer, was killed instantly early Monday morning when the car in which he was riding skidded and overturned in a ditch on Woodside road near Redwood City. Atkins was crushed against a power pole.

Frederick Mock, of Redwood City, driver of the car, was cut and bruised. He was booked on a technical charge of manslaughter. His wife, Mrs. Alla Mock, was also injured slightly. Mock told the police that the accident occurred when he turned out to allow another car to pass.

Struck by a hit and run driver while standing in a safety zone, G. Petri, 40, of San Francisco, was killed early Sunday morning in the Visitation Valley. Petri, who had just alighted from a street car, was dragged from the San Francisco city limits over the San Mateo county line.

Because of hospital red tape, traffic officers were forced to summon an ambulance from Mills Memorial hospital and Petri died before reaching San Mateo. The driver of a large black sedan which struck the man is being sought by police.

Santa Mondello, 24, of San Francisco, suffered a fractured skull and a broken nose when his car collided with another.

West African Colony of Liberia Flourishing

The free negro republic of Liberia was established in West Africa long before slavery was abolished in this country. The American Colonization society was formed in December, 1816, for the purpose of colonizing part of Africa with freed negroes. The first company of colonists, consisting of 89 persons, sailed in 1820, but on arriving in Sierra Leone many of them succumbed to malaria. Colonization under the auspices of the American Colonization society continued until 1847, when the society withdrew its active assistance and urged the settlers to set up an independent form of government. A constitution patterned after that of the United States was adopted in July, 1847. At that time the number of immigrants from America and their descendants was about 3,000. At the present time there are about 20,000 American-Liberians, of whom about half live in the city of Monrovia, the capital and chief port. The native population numbers about 1,500,000. The United States has given the republic financial aid, taken charge of the custom houses, trained its military forces and aided in other ways.

Too Many Kind Things
Said About "Busy Bee"

The "busy bee" beloved of an older generation of teachers and preachers, has been dethroned. He's only a time-waster, after all! Apparently, the United States Department of Agriculture has been trying him out—and finding him out in the process. The researchers show that the maximum speed of the bee is 25 miles an hour—which motorists agree is pretty poor—and that, as a rule, the insect doesn't fly any faster than 15. But apparently we must always have something to set an example. Just as America proves the bee a laggard, along comes Carmarthenshire (Wales) with a cow that is bang up to date. This cow is so much of an enthusiast for modern methods that she refuses to be milked by hand. If anyone tries to insult her in this way she kicks the bucket out of doors. But she submits willingly to the milking machine and gives a good yield.

Famous Botanic Garden

The Botanic garden in Washington was established by the Columbian Institute for the Promotion of Arts and Sciences, incorporated by an act of congress April 20, 1818. The present site was granted by congress in 1820 and there is a tradition that George Washington contemplated the establishment of gardens in this locality. Up to 1836 no improvements had been made. The tract was a stagnant and malarial swamp and congress was prevailed upon to make an appropriation of $5,000 for improvements. The real beginning, however, of the Botanic garden dates from the Wilkes exploration expedition of 1838 to 1842. The staff included a botanist, W. D. Breckinridge, who brought back from an expedition to the South seas a large collection of specimens, including seeds and cuttings. This formed the nucleus of the botanical collection.

Crossing Behring Straits

It is only in comparatively recent years that the origin of man has been thrust by geologists, anthropologists, biologists and other scientists far enough back into the misty past to admit of a common population of Asia and North America because of land connection between them, and their separation by destruction of this connecting link, thus rendering any crossing of the now separating waters unnecessary. Perhaps no canoe ever crossed Behring straits until Behring himself crossed it and discovered the Alaskan coast some two centuries ago. Still more unlikely is it that the broad Pacific was crossed in crude canoes from island group to group, the nearest group to America being some 2,000 miles distant.

Old Warships Used Again

Old fighting ships that have outlived their first usefulness serve another purpose equally good in its way. The formidable warships of 30 years ago look like model boats beside the present-day fighting machines, one of which weighs more than a half-dozen of the old type. Their ultimate fate is the junk pile but not a pound of metal is lost. The old wood is burned out, then all convertible metal is broken up, copper and brass separated from steel and everything manufactured into something else. The discarded ships are generally bought by firms who specialize in breaking up old vessels for their metal and the work is done almost as scientifically as in the building process.

Romantic Relics

There were many romantic relics in the exhibition of Scottish antiques recently held in London. Many women visitors found the baby clothes of Charles I among the most interesting of the exhibits. They included a little cap, which might quite well be worn by a modern baby—three centuries haven't changed the particular fashion so very much! The child who wore the baby clothes was to go down in history as the "Royal martyr" and his fate is recalled by another relic—a crystal locket which contains a clot of blood taken from his scaffold. Other interesting exhibits included the first Bible printed in Scotland and Sir Walter Scott's own edition of "Waverley."

Much Silly Talk About
Those "Good Old Days"

Folks must be joking when they refer to the good old days. Without going back to pioneer times many can recall something about them.

We used kerosene lamps which were dirty and required refilling. Now we touch a button. We kept a team of horses in a smelly stable and fed them three times a day besides acting as groom. Now we spring the self-starter and away we go on a tireless steed. We split kindling and split wood and carried coal, an endless job. Now in many cases the heating plant is automatic. And the cooking arrangements are well-nigh perfect.

Women spent much time making dresses and hats and then they often looked dowdy. Now the stores provide both much more cheaply and much better in every way. Same way with women's clothing of all kinds. Foods, tinned, bottled and packed, are better and more sanitary than in the old days of home preparing.

Because of great progress our physical well-being has been improved. Our mental appetites can more easily be appeased. There is something wrong in the outlook of any person who seems to hunger for the good old days. As the boy on the corner said: "That's the balony."—Toledo Blade.

Seven Languages Heard
in Old City of Tallinn

Long subject to the mercuries of the pirates of the Baltic, then submissive to the kings of Denmark and Sweden or bowing allegiance to German barons, or conquered by Peter the Great, it was not till 1848 that Estonia and its capital, Tallinn, became its own again. The top of Tallinn is Toompea, the great castle of the Middle ages which frowns on the city, but lifts the visitor to see a wonderfully attractive city of gables, spires and cobblestones. Built on a rocky craig in 1219, you can look down its massive steep sides to the now treelanted moat and easily visualize the embattled past it has known. The city was fortified in the early Fourteenth century and its old gates and wall remnants yet remain. In Tallinn you can speak Russian, German, English, French, Swedish, or Danish, and be understood, though you speak not Estonian.

Ancient English Oak

Cowthorpe oak is said to be the oldest in England, observes the Montreal Family Herald. Records say that it is about one thousand six hundred years of age. Taking root near the great Roman road, some three miles from Wetherby, it became one of the mightiest oaks in England. On one occasion 100 children gathered in its hollow trunk. In 1842 the tree was estimated to contain 74 tons of timber, the trunk was 60 feet in circumference, it was 43 feet high, and its main branch 50 feet 6 inches long. But where once (it is said) boughs spread over half an acre, there remain only its huge gaunt limbs. Every spring, however, green leaves still appear among the topmost branches, and workmen are doing what they can to keep the giant alive for a few more years.

Enthusiasm for Mallorca

Tourists are frequently a puzzle. They travel well worn ruts for years, seeing what every one has seen and then suddenly "discover" some hidden nook of charm with enthusiasm. It is often in this fashion that the Balearic Isles off the coast of Spain are "discovered." The Isle of Mallorca has a lovely coastline, hills to the south and east, mountains to the north and west and fertile plains within make it a pleasant habitation. Seek out the old monastery of Valldemossa, or the subterranean lakes and caves with their legends of Corsair pirates, ancient castles and miles of sandy beaches, sunsets through almond trees and cheap living and you will be enthusiastic, too.—Boston Herald.

Rice Most Important Food

Rice is the principal food of more than one-third of the entire population of the world, and is the most extensively cultivated of grains. Workers of the American rubber plantations in Liberia eat it, along with the coolies of Japan and China, the Kaffirs of the South African diamond mines and the head hunters of Fiji.

The League of Nations' statistical survey of what is what in foodstuffs indorses the United States system of rice grading as being a desirable method to follow, explaining that export rice from that source is invariably accompanied by certificate of inspection as evidence of quality delivered. A million packets of rice are yearly exported under this provision.

"Horseflesh"

The word most generally used for the meat of a horse is "horseflesh." Our words for the meat of domestic animals, "beef, veal, pork and mutton," are all derived from the French, while the Anglo-Saxon words are retained for the names of the animals themselves. The French word for horse, "cheval," was never adopted into the English language to denote "horseflesh," probably because there was never any need for it.

Why Do Men Marry?

Ed Howe remarks that women marry for love, money or to have a home. It is not known why men marry.—American Magazine.

By J. H. NEUSTADT

It is beginning to look as though "deer days" are over in the orchards. Between the opening of the hunting season and the scientific deer damage investigation by the Division of Fish and Game, "Farmer Brown" may rock serenely on his porch for a few evenings, at least. According to reports, he has spent a great deal of his spare and working time trying to chase deer from all sections of his ranch. Success was limited, because he couldn't be everywhere at once.

When the animals left the orchards they generally took much fruit and foliage with them, reports say, and during the farmer's sleeping hours they had everything their own way. An appeal to the Division of Fish and Game resulted in immediate action, and scientific investigators were sent into the field. Many remedies were tried.

One of the latest and most successful methods experimented with involves the use of naphthalene flakes. Gordon H. True, Jr., discovered that by placing a small quantity of these flakes in muslin bags and hanging same in young prune and walnut trees, the damage from deer dropped to zero. This method has been under observation for about two months in the orchards of J. H. Haub, at Geyserville, and E. D. Rogers at Swanton.

In preparing the bags, place about two tablespoons full of the naphthalene in each bag and hang same in the trees. The antidote must be renewed about once a month. One pound of the naphthalene will be sufficient for about twelve bags.

According to True, naphthalene is a by-product in various industries in this state and does not sell at an excessive cost. He says it is one of the cheapest methods that has been tried up to this time. Experiments will now be conducted with naphthalene to try to prevent deer from taking the fruit that drops to the ground.

Samuel Bowlby, of Montabello, Cal., drove his car to the rear of an undertaker's establishment and ended his own life.

Convicted of operating a still, Joe Riddle, aged 99, was sent to jail in Frederick county, Virginia.

Captain William Bartlett, noted sealing sea captain, who died a few days ago in New Foundland at the age of 84, had a unique record. In 60 years of sailing the treacherous North Atlantic in all kinds of weather he never lost a man at sea. He and his crews captured more than 500,000 seals during his seagoing career, which ended only two years ago. He was the father of famed Captain Robert Bartlett, skipper of Peary's expedition to the North Pole.

France has become the second largest producer of motorcycles, now ranking next to Great Britain and being followed by Germany and the United States.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1931 NUMBER 7

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

One On Him

Wife: "Did you mail that letter I gave you?"

Hubby: "Yes, dear, I carried it in my hand so I wouldn't forget it, and dropped it in the first box. I remember, because—"

Wife: "There, dear, don't say any more. I didn't give you a letter to mail."

"Never do that again, John."

"Heh?"

"Never honk for me to come out of church."

Her Fire Alarm

First Stenog: "Did you observe Fire Prevention week?"

Second Ditto: "Yes, I got into the office earlier; the boss was getting sore."

Esteemed Colleague Messenger (to newsboy): "Who's the swell guy we was talkin' to, Jimmie?"

Newsboy: "Aw, him an' me worked together for years. He's the editor of one of my papers."

Square people, not square miles, make a country great.

Small Boy: "Pa, what did prehistoric monsters look like?"

Father: "I don't remember. Ask your mother."

Teacher: "What is the matter with your singing? You are simply screeching."

Student: "Only hittin' on one tonsil."

We carry a complete line of Builders' Hardware.

ABERDEEN and American Block, the Coal that satisfies.

Rah! Rah!

"How do you play hockey from the correspondence school?"

"I send them an empty envelope."

When you think of building, think of H. H.

Tourist: "You've got a big farm here, but it's all covered with rocks. I don't see how you make a living on it."

Farmer: "Wal, y're goin' t' see. I own all the mudhole rights on this detour."

You are not dressed for work until you put on a smile.
